

Suggested Reading for a University Degree

Once you have been accepted on to a degree course you are sometimes sent a reading list of books that can help you to prepare for the course in advance. It can be beneficial to read a few of these over the summer holidays between Year 12 and 13 to help with inspiration for your personal statement or potential university interviews. Not many universities publish these; they are available from the 2 institutions below

University of Oxford

King's College, University of Cambridge

It is also worth doing an internet search of suggested reading for a specific degree. A search for Architecture found the following from the University of Liverpool and Biomedical Science from the University of Sheffield

University books can be very expensive so it's worth checking with a library or second hand supplier first.

News articles and blogs are available on many professional bodies such as the Chartered Society of Physiotherapy, The Law Society, Chartered Institute of Ecology and Environmental Management, The Society for the Study of Artificial Intelligence and Simulation of Behaviour The Engineering Council

There are also many relevant magazines and journals a few are listed below:

Vet Times, Nursing Times, New Design, Construction News, Flight International, The Stage, Property Weekly and Farmers Weekly. An internet search will find one for the degree that interests you.
